New health center director extends hours at county facility

Molly Tippen
Staff Writer

Linda Jordan has a great deal of experience in operating and managing health centers, and her arrival in Inkster means some changes will occur at the Wayne County Family Health Center.

Jordan, who accepted the position in June, said she immediately noticed that some of the rules at the center needed to be changed. Her first priority was the hours of operation.

"We needed to have hours that worked better for our patients," said Jordan, who said she's busy acclimating herself to her position.

"Many of our patients work, and we don't want them to wait to come here," she added. "We had a rate of people not coming in for appointments that was about 30 percent."

Jordan instituted a program that ensured a patient could get in for a doctor's visit the next day, if they could not be seen the day they came in.

Jordan said other changes are coming soon for the health center.

"We're going to work on bringing mental health services to the center," she said. "We can't ask patients to come in and take care of their tests if they can't get out of bed – depression and other (mental health) issues are problematic for several people. It's an area we need to better address."

Community Health Centers – which were created in 1965 by the federal government to assist low-income and uninsured Americans – serve residents that have traditionally had a difficult time paying for medical care.

The centers are managed by an independent board of directors comprised of individuals from the community it serves.

The center on Hamlin opened in August 2006, and serves all residents of Wayne County. Though it's not a free clinic, the concept behind the health center is to make basic care more affordable by offering payment plans, and adjusted process for services based on income levels.

Jordan is a native of Chicago, and is a nurse by trade. She has held positions all over the United States, and after earning several degrees, was able to enter the management sector of health care. "I believe that access to health care is one of the biggest issues facing poor people, and they are same people that need a medical home," she said. "We don't want them to come here because it's what they can afford. We want hem to come here because they know they can get quality care."

One way to introduce residents to the center is to offer free health screenings, which will be available in August. The screenings will commemorate National Health Center Week, Aug. 6-11. The screenings will include an interview with a health provider, blood pressure checks, and glucose screening to detect diabetes. Information on diet, exercise, and other avenues of preventive care will also be available.

The health center is open to all residents of Wayne County. Though general doctor's appointment fees are based on a sliding scale depending on a patient's income and other factors, the screenings are free of charge. The facility is located at 2500 Hamlin Ct., behind the Inkster Fire Station.

Teen arrested in raid

A 19-year-old man was arrested and several other people cited after police conducted a raid on a Wayne home this week.

Lt. Jason Wright of the Wayne Police Department said the Community Oriented Police Crime Reduction Unit (COPCRU) executed a narcotics search warrant at the home on Phyllis Street at about 10:30 p.m. on July 17.

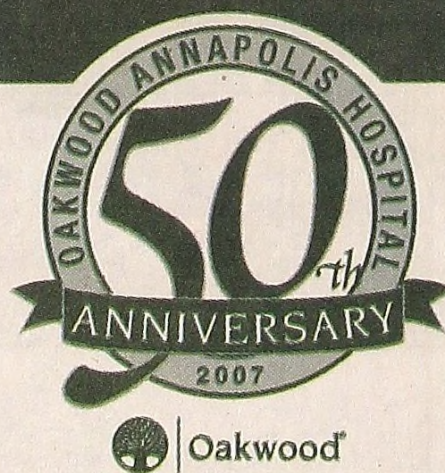

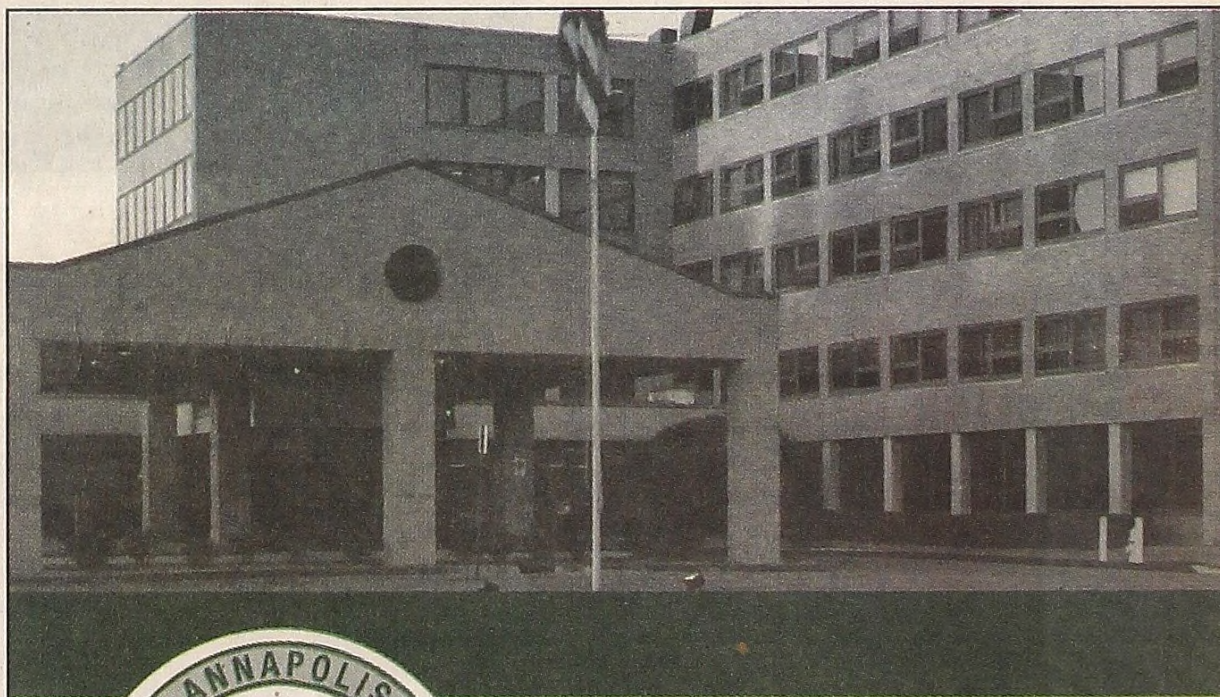

"The COPCRU had an ongoing investigation there regarding narcotics activity," he said.

There were several people in the home when police entered, Wright said. Police also found several rocks of crack cocaine packaged for sale, scales, ledgers and other drug paraphernalia as well as a small amount of marijuana.

Police arrested Kenny Charles, who lived at the home. He was arraigned at the 29th District Court in Wayne on charges of delivering and manufacturing cocaine, a 20-year felony; possession with intent to deliver marijuana, a four-year felony, as well as maintaining a drug house, a two-year misdemeanor.

Four other people were cited during the raid, according to Wright. Three were issued tickets for frequenting a drug house; one of those suspects, a minor, was also cited for possessing tobacco. A fourth suspect was cited for possession of drug paraphernalia.

Charles is being held on a $50,000 cash bond. His preliminary examination is scheduled for July 31 at the 29th District Court.

City animal shelter advocate dies suddenly

Molly Tippen
Staff Writer

Frank Ayers helped many people during his brief life.

Most recently, he was working hard to get a new animal shelter built in Romulus, and was busy planning and attending the many local fundraisers contributing to that cause.

Mr. Ayers will never see the facility constructed. He died on July 17 of an apparent heart attack. He was 51 years old.

Councilman William Wadsworth – the driving force behind the animal shelter movement – said at the Monday night city council meeting that Mr. Ayers was a dear friend that was committed to helping out in his community.

“I first met Frank when I gave him a speeding ticket more than 20 years ago,” said Wadsworth. “And we became fast friends. (Ayers) was at every fundraiser, every event associated with the animal shelter. His loss is devastating to us.”

Mr. Ayers worked delivering freight to local businesses, but spent most of his time helping others, said his wife, Lois Ayers.

“He just wanted to help people,” she said. “I would spend a lot of time at home, but Frank was always out there helping people. He was especially committed to getting an animal shelter built because he loved animals.”

The couple had been married for about 20 years, and had a big, combined family that included Frank Ayers’ two children and his wife’s four children. Still, he always had time for community activities.

Mr. Ayers was a member of the Eagle’s, among other organizations in the city.

Wadsworth said Mr. Ayers was not originally from the city, but considered Romulus his home. “I think he moved here with his parents when he was very young,” he said. He graduated from Romulus High School. He made this community his home.”

Peterson Funeral Home in Taylor arranged funeral services for Mr. Ayers.

Mr. Ayers is survived by his wife, Lois, two children, four stepchildren, nine grandchildren and many friends.

“When school is out, it’s tougher, and we still have two months to go.”

The shortfall also comes at a time when more people are requesting assistance, said Dugan.

Because of the sluggish economy, food banks have had a difficult time keeping up with requests from area residents for assistance. According to a report released by the Food Bank Council of Michigan, 64 million pounds of food was distributed to 1.1 million Michigan residents in 2006, which means one of every nine residents in Michigan requested help. Of those recipients, 42 percent were senior citizens.

Crout said a Helping Hands volunteer told him a story of a woman who came into the pantry with her two children.

“She told them she didn’t even care about herself – she just needed food for her children,” he said.

Romulus Helping Hands pantry accepts donations from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays at the 37510 Huron River Dr. location.

Man charged in resident’s death

Kevin Hill
Staff Writer

A Belleville man is due back at 35th District Court in Plymouth tomorrow for a preliminary examination on charges related to the death of Romulus resident Anthony Salvatore Quasarano.

William Floyd Craner, 45, is charged with second-degree murder, punishable by up to life in prison. He is also charged with first-degree fleeing and eluding police, a 15-year felony; manslaughter with a motor vehicle, a 15-year felony and felony with a motor vehicle, an advisory charge that can increase the sentence of the other charges.

Police say Craner led them on a 2-mile chase when an officer tried to stop the suspect’s Chevrolet Camaro on eastbound Michigan Avenue near Belleville Road in Canton Township on July 15.

“This is a disturbing case where an innocent motorcycle driver was killed in a car crash by a person who failed to recognize that a car is a lethal weapon,” said Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy.

Craner struck Quasarano, who was riding a motorcycle in

Van Buren board sets voting dates

Andrea King
Staff Writer

The Van Buren Public School District Board of Education formally changed and adopted the election date for school board elections on Monday.

Starting in 2008, elections will take place during the November general election and include an extension of board members’ terms.

In addition to the annual election change, proposed bylaws were presented to the board, as well.

“Effective the 2008 election, the district’s regular election will occur annually on the first Tuesday in November,” said Trustee Martha Toth. “The terms of currently seated board members that expire on June 30, 2008-2011 will be extended through Dec. 31 of the given year. Effective with members elected at the 2008 election, all terms shall begin on Jan. 1 of the year following the election.”

A second reading will come back to school officials at 7:30 p.m. on Aug. 13.

Two sales were approved by the board of education, too.

Used school buses were sold to both Van Buren Township and Sumpter Township for $1. The remaining 24 buses will be sold through a public bid. The sale of the building trades home, located at 47175 Bemis Road, was also approved at a price of $235,000. Nick Armelagos, director of finance and operations for the district, said that was the offer brought to Van Buren schools.

Board members also approved three new hires for a math teacher, art teacher and social worker at the schools.

this,” said Councilman William Wadsworth. Other council members said they would not support such a move until they know the legal ramifications.

Romulus has been in the midst of a residential building boom for about five years, and though several planned subdivisions have come to fruition, piecemeal building in existing neighborhoods has also taken place.

Lyon said the economic development department is not advising a moratorium on lot splitting.

“Because of the economic conditions in the state, we’re just not advising (a moratorium) at this time,” she said.

One of the great things about the city is that we still have something for everyone.

Mayor Alan Lambert

No other council members voiced support for the idea of a moratorium during the meeting.

Placing a moratorium on splitting may be difficult legally because state land division laws allow splits.

Provisions can be made that would require splits to adhere to lot size and setback requirements, but zoning parameters must be broadly applied to all designations throughout the city.

Mayor Alan Lambert doesn’t live in the area of Ozga and Tyler, but a similar lot-split situation played out in his neighborhood, and he wasn’t happy about it.

“One of the great things about the city is that we still have something for everyone,” he said. “There are places where it’s still rural.”

The session to discuss the overlay district will take place on Sept. 11 at City Hall, 11111 Wayne Road. A time will be set in the near future.

Theater fundraiser pursues worthy record

In the heart of downtown Wayne, there is a historic structure that once symbolized the stature of the community itself.

The old Palace Theater, now dubbed the Historic Wayne Theater, once drew people from miles around to take in a variety of shows and events.

Vacant for more than 20 years now, there has been a serious attempt to gather the money to bring it up to code and save it from demolition. The organizers of this effort, led by Don Nicholson, the capital fundraising chairman, face a September deadline.

Their task hasn't been easy. Frustrating might be a better word.

Even so, they haven't given up and their latest attempt to generate money and publicity might end up being the best received at all.

They're trying to make history, in a way, by setting a record for the most single dollar bills ever collected in a fundraiser.

"It's not an official Guinness record, but we're trying to make it one," said Nicholson.

It's only been a week, but he said he's seen a more positive response than from any of the other fundraising efforts—which have ranged from the weekly 6 p.m. Saturday night concerts to placing plastic piggy banks in area stores and restaurants to hosting a $100 a plate dinner fundraiser earlier this year.

They began the dollar bill effort last week and generated nearly $270 in two days.

They also took another, subtle step toward promoting the project by changing the marquee out front. It went from an ominous count-down to a more positive message: We can do it, but we need your help.

The 'help' is the source of frustration. It's been there, but in limited amounts—particularly from Wayne residents. Nicholson has said a few members of the city council have attended some of the weekly fundraiser concerts and a scattering of other residents attending, too, but most of the support has come from outside the community.

It's difficult to understand why when you consider some of the talk you hear around town, in taverns and restaurants and at an occasional city council meeting.

That talk centers around a concern for the city, for the lagging business district. Residents are quick to point out the vacant storefronts along Michigan Avenue. They yearn for a national chain—retailer, restaurant or otherwise—to come to town and spark an economic development.

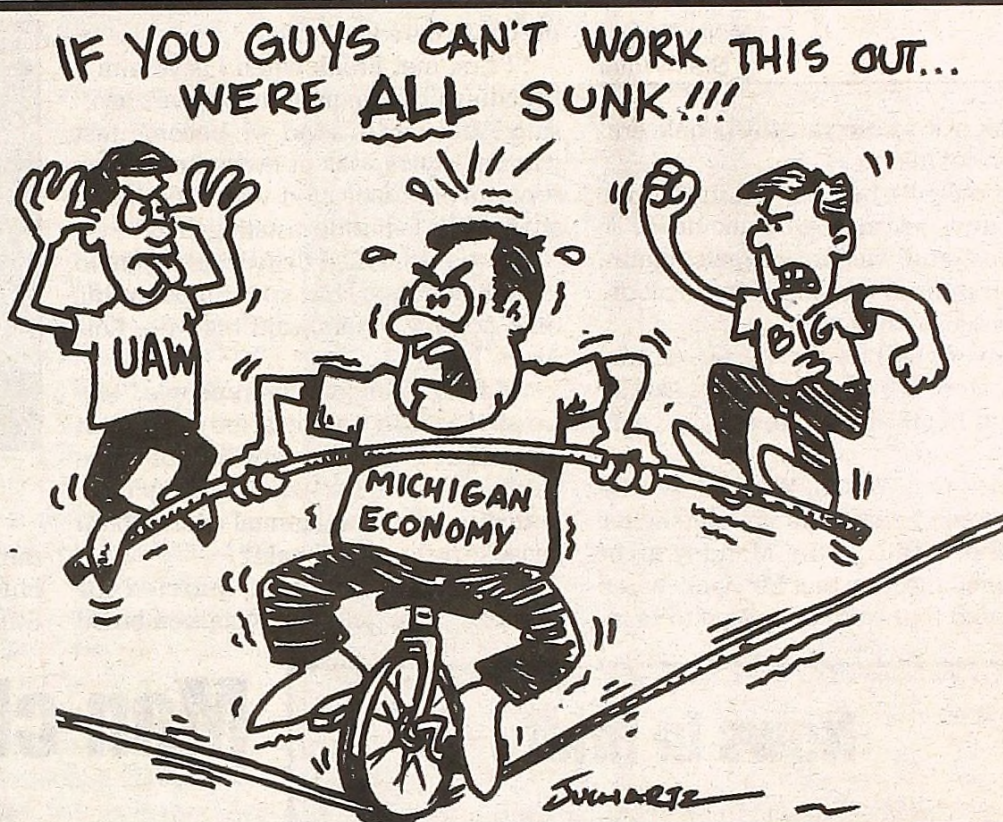

Yet here, in the heart of the community, is a unique feature that could do all of that and more and residents seem unwilling to support it.

Restored according to Nicholson's vision—as a regional arts center that would include new retail and restaurant space, house a variety of cultural groups and provide a regional draw for concerts and other events—the theater could be a catalyst for downtown Wayne like no other.

National corporations might be nice to have in a community, but we would rather see things that are uniquely Wayne, things you can't find anywhere else. We'd rather see a thriving business community built up of characters, not conglomerates.

For that, though, the support of the community is needed. This new fundraising idea has merit because it's not asking too much of anyone. You don't have to shell out $10 for the concert—or $5 if you're a senior citizen or student—or send in a few grand to be a major sponsor. If everyone in town would chip in, it would go a long way toward helping the volunteers at the theater beat their September deadline—

Change of latitude, attitude

There was an unusual scene last week at the Schrader-Howell Funeral home in Plymouth.

Mourners milled about, some in formal attire, others wearing 'protest' t-shirts or wearing buttons emblazoned with the logo: 'No scab papers.' Most, though, wore Hawaiian-print shirts. An electric palm tree gleamed by the poster boards jammed with pictures that bordered a hastily scrawled portion of a Jimmy Buffet song.

That pretty much summed up Mike Carne.

I was surprised at the news that he had passed on—as were many others. He went from healthy to the grave in about a month and a half, victimized by a stroke and a particularly vicious form of cancer.

There was a good crowd, too, considering that Mike was never the kind of person to seek the limelight. He worked behind the scenes but he was always passionate about what he did.

He was a graphic designer by trade, but his talents exceeded those areas. He was a writer and a poet and a dedicated Parrothead—he never missed a concert.

Without knowing it, he helped me gain a better understanding of what it meant to be a newspaper man.

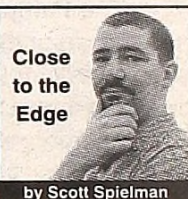

I met him at a previous place of employment—

the now-defunct Community Crier in Plymouth. Carne had worked off and on for the company and its graphic subsidiary and, at the time, was heavily involved in the Detroit Sunday Journal, the weekly publication put out by striking workers from the big Detroit dailies. He helped launch that and put it together back when it was produced from a grubby basement in downtown Plymouth.

I have a couple of distinct memories about him. One of them was work related. It was a hot day and we were all frantically working on the biggest issue of the year, our annual Fall Festival edition. We in the editorial department were stuck, trying to bring a new look to the annual thing when Mike walked by. He was busy with several other things at the time but he sat down with us and, in about 20 or 30 minutes, taught me more about graphic design than I ever learned in college. He had a way of making the unconventional look conventional; you wondered why things weren't done that way all along.

The second was from a trip to his house off Haggerty Road. There was still enough of a child

Time to make some new memories

I've read a lot of newspaper stories and columns this week that begin with "On July 23, 1967..."

Well, on July 23, 1967, I wasn't alive. Today, I'm just old enough to begin to comprehend the complexities surrounding the violence that first erupted on 12th Street in Detroit and spilled over into decades of decay, frustration and resentment.

We're still talking about the riot 40 years later because we simply haven't gotten past it. There were other cities that experienced rioting that year, but Detroit is still suffering from the unrest.

This region should never forget those events, I know. And maybe on the 40th anniversary it makes sense to remember. But why is it still so difficult the other 51 weeks of the year to look forward instead of backward. To push ourselves. To strive for where the region can rise, not where it is destined to slide.

I have read plenty of stories this week about the generation who moved out of Detroit in the 1960s and afterward (many had been moving out long before). Most of them longed for the city to be great again. Some moved back. Some want to.

I read a good deal about why the events of 1967 might more aptly be termed a "rebellion"—a lashing out at decades of police brutality and discrimination.

I read a lot that I expect I will be reading again in 2017. What have we learned, 50 years later?

We'll be reading that because of the attitudes that still permeate this area, because of the things that people say that I didn't read much about this week.

I didn't read any of the stories that you more often hear in private, from people who left the city long ago and have no intention of returning.

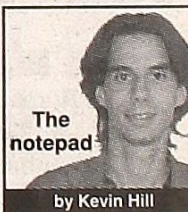

I didn't read any letters to the editor that spoke against the need for continued healing in this ill town, whose afflictions are felt throughout the region and the state.

I didn't see the type of vitriol I usually find on some Web sites. One local newspaper wisely shut off reader comments for the riot coverage on their Web site, to spare the rest of us from reading the anonymous hate that tends to appear there.

There are still plenty of people around who root against the city, of course. And there are those in the city that want nothing to do with the suburbs.

The way the rest of the nation sees it, though, there is no difference between Auburn Hills and Detroit. The sooner this area realizes that, the better.

Those that came before my generation seem to Supervisor supports millage

To the editor,

I feel compelled to comment upon the editorial in last week's Belleville Enterprise. As your township supervisor, I believe you deserve to understand why I supported the millage question for which you will be voting Aug. 7. The editor's opinion is that voters should have been offered a choice between renewing the 3 mills and approving one additional mill. Normally, I would agree with the logic set forth by the editor, but in this case, I would like an opportunity to explain why I didn't support placing two questions on the ballot.

Fundamentally, this issue is a matter of public safety—your safety. Van Buren Township is unique as compared to neighboring communities; Belleville Lake bisects the community in half and as a result, only three north/south thoroughfares are available for motorists—and emergency personnel—to get from the north to the south. The township is also home to two freeways, two railroads, two landfills, Willow Run Airport and a sizeable mix of industry and commercial establishments, not to mention our increase in residential uses. Please think about this: any emergency situation that can occur in any community or region can occur in Van Buren.

Yet, Van Buren's police force is staffed at about 60 percent of the number of officers we should have for a community our size. This, coupled with fire services provided by a paid per call complement of fire fighters is not a desired nor sustainable means for providing emergency services.

I believe that had we given voters the choice to renew the 3 mills and separately vote to add 1 additional mill, we would be sending a false message that the 3 mills is sufficient to provide high quality public safety services. The 3 mills is not adequate. The existing millage only funds about 50 percent of the department's operations; the remainder (which will continue should voters support the millage request) comes from general fund and landfill fund revenues.

Why are we asking you to support 4 mills for public safety services? To assign fire fighters on a 24/7 basis at both fire stations, as compared to the current 20 hours per day at only our north station. Doing so will reduce response times to fires and medical emergencies, saving property and most importantly, lives. We want to form a special investigation unit to address fraud, ID theft and crimes such as narcotics activity and crimes against juveniles so that Van Buren becomes an unwelcome place for criminals to ply their trades.

Having two questions on the ballot would have sent a message that is not accurate. Three mills is not enough to address the public safety service residents, taxpayers and business owners deserve in Van Buren Township today. Four mills will permit the department to improve upon police and fire services, and those are improvements worthy of voters' support. For your safety, for the protection of your property, your assets—your home and your family—I urge you to vote Yes on Aug. 7.

Cindy C. King,
Van Buren Township Supervisor

in me to gape in wonder at the entire room that had been transformed into a habitat for his full-grown iguanas. His landlord might not've been too happy about that, but I thought it was pretty cool.

That's what I liked about him. He had found the perfect balance between adulthood and adolescence. He knew what to take seriously but he never let life's many difficulties get in his way. He had a casual way of helping people that told you he didn't think about it; he just did it. He was the kind of person we should all strive to be.

I didn't see him much after we left The Crier. He went to Foursight in Plymouth and I came here. I'm sorry I didn't get a chance to visit him during the illness that eventually claimed him—he remained a practical joker to the end.

I hope, now, he's found his peace.

In this, a little bit will go a long way. It will help send a message out to the greater business community, too. We ask for some retailer to come in, take a chance and make a major investment to build something new in our town. That might be easier to accomplish if we all contributed a little bit to something that's already here.

On July 23, 1967 and afterward: we were born into your mess. We don't want it, and we don't want to perpetuate it.

Like all cities, there is death and rebirth in Detroit. Things will improve. Things just move a little slower here.

I care about what happened in 1967. I long for a time—even when those tempting round-numbered anniversaries approach—when we won't remember.

Kid’s triathlon

The 11th annual Summer Kid’s Triathlon took off in leaps and bounds recently in Belleville. The event took place at Belleville High School, bringing together participants from the city, Van Buren Township and Sumpter Township. Parents, fans, volunteers and the sponsor—the City of Belleville Parks and Recreations Commission—showed their team spirit as the children competed in the shot put, long jump and run division. Each division—ages 3-18-years-old—contended to receive honors. Amalia Chedraue, member of the parks and recreation commission, said it was a wonderful community event. “It was nice to see the parents and kids all come out together,” she said. “The children were really happy when the firefighters came, too.” Each contestant received a participation button, a ribbon and ice cream provided by Cool Cone in Belleville. “Everyone enjoyed the day and it was nice to see the community come together,” said Chedraue. “This was my first triathlon I got to go to, but I really enjoyed it.”

Township to buy foreclosed land

Van Buren Township officials approved the purchase of foreclosed land from Wayne County recently.

The land—about 15 acres total—was foreclosed on by the Wayne County Treasurer for delinquent taxes of $28,058. It affords the township the opportunity to pay taxes on it to acquire the land, according to Township Supervisor Cindy King.

"We don't have a use for the land right now, but the thought is with the southwest portion of the township there might be a time in the future for land use, like for public safety needs, a park or some other structure," she said. "For us, this is a bargain."

About 5 acres of land on Elwell Road will be purchased for $12,868.01, while about 10 acres on Haggerty Road, just south of Savage Road, will be $15,190.71. The funds will come from the township designated fund balance.

Trustee Jeff Jahr said he was concerned with the liability.

"I thought about it though and, I think it's the right price we're paying for 15 acres of property in Van Buren," he said. "It's a deal. I don't see how we can lose, but if the market turns around I could see this back on the tax rolls. The community would benefit, too."

"I expressed reservation at first, but I will support this," he added.

Whaler selected to USA under 18 team

Plymouth Whaler AJ Jenks continues to move on a fast track.

Jenks, from Wolverine Lake, just turned 17 and was selected by USA Hockey to play for its Under-18 Select team in the 2007 Memorial of Ivan Hlinka Tournament in Piestany, Slovakia. The tournament takes place from Aug. 14-18.

The Memorial of Ivan Hlinka Tournament features the top 17-year-old players in the World and is a prelude to the World Junior Championships.

"We're excited for AJ," said Mike Vellucci Plymouth Whalers president, general manager and head coach. "He played well for us last season. We expect him to improve this year."

Jenks was selected by Plymouth in the seventh round (132nd overall) in the 2006 OHL Draft. He originally committed to play at the University of Michigan, but decided to come to the Whalers after he attended the team's Rookie Orientation Camp in May of 2006.

Jenks is no stranger to the Whalers or the Compuware Sports Arena, having watched and followed the team as a fan. He also played in the Compuware Youth Hockey system.

"It's pretty cool that I played in the Compuware system and now I play for the Whalers," Jenks said last season. "I see a lot of the kids in their Compuware stuff around the rink and realize that I was just like them not too long ago. As far as players in the OHL, I played with Patrick Moran on Compuware, and he is now with Guelph. I kind of grew up watching the Whalers. I saw the Whalers for a few years, so it is pretty cool to now be playing for them."

As one of the youngest players in the OHL last season, Jenks did not look out of place on a veteran Whalers team that won the league championship and played in the Canadian Hockey League MasterCard Memorial Cup tournament in Vancouver, BC, in May.

Jenks scored nine goals with 14 assists for 23 points while playing in every regular season game for Plymouth last season. He was also one the team's best penalty killers. The Whalers led the OHL in penalty killing last season with an 87.9 percent ratio.

A.J. Jenks, a 17-year-old from Wolverine Lake, MI, continues to impress on the ice. Fresh from a solid season with the Plymouth Whalers, Jenks was named by USA Hockey to play for the Under-18 Select team in the 2007 Memorial of Ivan Hlinka Tournament in Piestany, Slovakia.

His intelligent play on the ice moved to the classroom as he was named Plymouth's Academic Player of the Year last season. He is eligible for the 2008 NHL Entry Draft.

All community volunteers are welcome, and any field users and their families are encouraged to join in the effort to improve the appearance of the stadium.

Volunteers are asked to wear old clothes and shoes, bring their own work gloves and come prepared to have fun while working.
